

Abstract

~~AT~~ The invention refers to the aspect of embodying a respective application-specific call code, necessary in the existing art, as an external control element implemented in a separate component, ^{is described. The} ~~the~~ external control element ^{is} ~~being~~ usable in any desired containers without thereby modifying the containers themselves or even knowing them at the time the external control element is designed. ^{This may be} ~~The invention is~~ used in data or information transmission systems, in particular process visualization systems. The components are implemented as software components, in particular as so-called ActiveX controls.

~~FIG. 4~~